THREE WORDS TO REVITALISE THE ECONOMY . . .

MADE IN BRITAIN

BRITAIN'S ECOMONY WILL continue in decline until consumer spending is re-directed to benefit the British Manufacturing Industry. Only when the shops in our High Streets are full of goods, made in British factories by British workers, will our country be able to move out of recession.

Foreign firms setting up assembly plants on British soil is not the answer. 1992 and the Single European Market will mean that multi-national companies will go where they can make the biggest impact and that is the centre of Europe.

Britain is an island and needs an island economy. No businessman in his right mind, who does not owe loyalty to Britain or the British people, is going to base a company on an island right away from the centre of his market.

The Channel Tunnel will make some difference to Britain but it won't benefit British industry. It will ease the entry into Britain of rabies, drug smugglers and illegal immigrants but little else. The delays and conjestion that will be its hallmark will frighten off any potential business setting up in Britain. Why should companies take the risk of delays when just across the channel in France or Belgium they can have a clear run to the centre of Europe.

Britain has to go it alone. We must follow Japan's example of the 1970s and 80s and build up a strong home market by excluding foreign manufactured imports from our shores.

* We must secure our present energy sources by investing in Britain's mines and banning the importation of foreign coal.

* We must look to the future by preserving our North Sea Oil and by promoting our unique situation for alternative means of energy such as wind and wave power.

* Our motor industry must provide the cars for the British people. With British technology and expertise together with a fine tradition of motor manufacturing, in a matter years we could once again be producing excellent cars at unbeatable prices for our people.

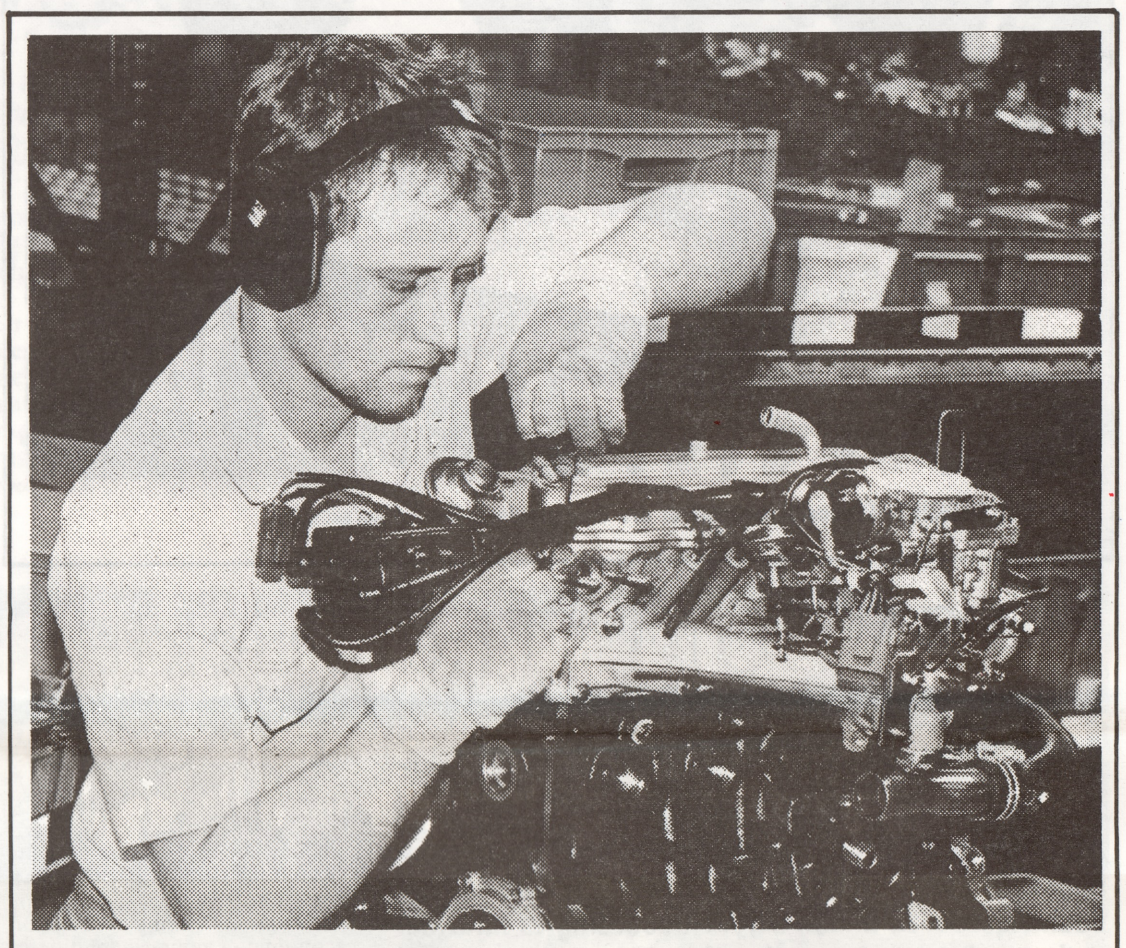
* Our clothes industry could be revitalised by banning the import of sweat-shop texiles from the Far East.

* Britain was once the world leader in electrical manufacturing. We can be again by investing in technology and research and banning goods from Japan and Taiwan.

Unless such action is taken Britain will carry on in decline and finish up an off-shore industrial wasteland, where the traditional skills of our people, handed down from generation to generation have been lost for ever. We will produce nothing and live on the goods produced by other countries. We will exist on Government hand-outs until the day their credit runs out with the IMF and then our island and people will be mortgaged to meet the debt.

We must take action NOW. We must boycott all foreign manufactured goods in our shops. Every British-made item that you buy is helping secure the job and future of a British worker.

The National Front is the only political party that advocates such a radical change. If you want to ensure a productive future for Britain creating the quality of life for the British people that goes with constructive employment then support National Front candidates in local council, parliamentary and Euro-elections.



MADE IN BRITAIN: These three words are going to be the hallmark of a rejuvenated British Economy. When we can make certain goods ourselves why on earth should we import them?

It is wrong to ask people to pay for health care and medicine when they are ill.

A TOTALLY FREE HEALTH SERVICE

THE NATIONAL FRONT believes it is fundamentally wrong to ask people to pay for health treatment and medicine when they are ill.

 It is a time when they are under pressure through being unwell, possibly losing wages because they are absent from work and generally finding it difficult to cope.

 This is why the National Front advocates a totally free National Health Service and the abolition of prescription charges.

 Our belief in Nationalism emanates from our recognition that a true nation is a unification of families. Just as it is the duty of breadwinners of the family to provide for all members of the family who are unable to provide for themselves, so it is the duty of the 'family of families' - the Nation, to provide for the sick, genuinely needy, the aged, infirm and such people as one-parent families.

 It is this thread that follows through all National Front thinking. We have a duty to look after our people. When someone falls ill what they need is good, quick and friendly health care. They don't want to worry about waiting lists, bed shortages or whether or not they can afford the treatment.

 The National Front believes that the National Health Service should be absolutely free to every British citizen.

KEEPING out foreign imports is a major factor in revitalising the British economy and providing jobs for our workforce in the future.

IMMIGRATION RECORD

MORE THAN 267,000 immigrants arrived in Britain in 1990 the highest number since records began 26 years ago.

 That figure was 122,000 higher than in 1989 - which was a record itself - and was the third consecutive yearly increase.

 The figures include a net influx of 66,000 non-British citizens, the highest since 1967.

 Most of the new arrivals came from the Indian sub-continent, Africa and the Caribbean.

 The Office of Population, Census and Surveys put Britain's ethnic population at 2,615,691 just 4.7% of the population. However independent statisticians put the total at over 5 million and at 10% of the population.

 30,000 British citizens left the country in 1990 to start a new life in Australia and New Zealand.

ASYLUM SEEKERS: Economic migrants or are they genuinely fleeing persecution.

ASYLUM: The Trickle That's Become a Flood!

by Darren Copeland

ASYLUM SEEKERS, MANY of them bogus economic migrants are costing the major industrialised countries £4.48 billion a year according to informal estimates carried out by the Inter-governmental Interior Ministries Secretariat based in Geneva.

The total spent on asylum seekers appears to have risen by 50% since 1989. The costs of asylum include amounts spent on extra immigration and clerical staff, housing, welfare benefits, legal expenses and aid workers' salaries.

The main destination for asylum seekers from Eastern Europe, as well as countries in Africa and Asia was Europe. The 13 western European countries in the secretariat received 543,600 asylum applications last year, up 27% from the figure of 426,100 in 1990.

In Germany - which accounts for roughly 40% of all asylum requests - figures from the Bonn Interior Ministry show that spending on asylum seekers in 1989 amounted to DM4 billion (£2.4 billion).

In view of the fact that asylum applications in Germany during the last three years have risen by over 100% - from 121,000 in 1989 to 256,100 last year - the actual 1991 cost was substantially higher, totalling at least £4 billion.

ASYLUM APPLICATIONS IN INDUSTRIALISED NATIONS

Australia	16,000
Austria	27,300
Belgium	15,200
Canada	31,000
Denmark	4,600
Finland	2,100
France	46,500
Germany	256,100
Italy	31,700
Netherlands	21,600
Norway	4,600
Spain	8,100
Sweden	26,500
Switzerland	41,600
UK	57,700
US	70,000

OUR airports have become congested with Asylum Seekers

Britain also experienced a huge rise in the number of asylum applications, which almost doubled from 30,000 in 1990 to 57,700 in 1991, all at the British taxpayers' expense.

Overall, if you add Australia, Canada and the United States to the western European nations, 660,000 people applied for asylum in the group of 16 industrialised nations that constitute the main destination for migrants fleeing from poor economic or political conditions at home.

This was 22% up on the total of 540,000 in 1990 according to figures assembled by the secretariat of the 16 countries' Interior Ministries, set up last summer to gauge the asylum problem.

The problem has been made worse by the fact that virtually every major industrialised country is now going through the longest period of recession since the 1930's, so that money that should be used to invest in and revive their economies and the lot of their native born citizens is having to go on newly arrived asylum seekers.

FEEBLE

Not that you can expect any of the establishment parties to solve the problem. For the time being the Tories have decided to drop their feeble asylum bill, while the Labour Party would make it easier for asylum seekers to get into the country by dropping the 'primary purpose' clause of the government's asylum bill which is meant to distinguish between 'political' and 'economic' refugees. The Liberal Democrats position on the issue can be gauged by the fact that Paddy Ashdown described this feeble bill as 'racist' and would happily allow 3.3 million Hong Kong Chinese into Britain.

Only the National Front has the guts to take a stand on this growing problem by ensuring a ban on all Third World immigration into Britain and by repatriating all non-European immigrants already here.

Only such action will make sure that British money is primarily spent on Britain's economy and the British people and perhaps, more importantly, preserving British culture and national identity.

A Strategy for our Railways

by Steve Brady

BRITAIN'S TRAIN SERVICE is in a mess. Everyone knows that. Trains are dirty, overcrowded, often late or cancelled, delayed because leaves fall in autumn and snow falls in winter. British Rail's "Passenger's Charter", dished out to frustrated commuters at the beginning of March, throws no more than empty words, devalued by small print get-outs, at the problem which is really caused, as a report appearing at the same time as the empty BR "charter" reveals, by gross underfunding. The Government refuses to pay for the decent service we deserve.

The report, prepared for the environmental pressure group Transport 2000 by consultants Steer Davis Gleeve, reveals that Britain invests less in our railways than almost any other West European country.

Even Spain and Portugal spend more per head of population than we do. France, Germany, Holland and Italy spend over three times as much per head on railways than us. Only the two most backward countries in Western Europe, Greece and the Irish Republic, spend less than us.

Britain has been spending less per head on rail services than most European countries for over ten years, while our rail system has been falling to pieces. Unlike most other European countries, we have no long-term investment plan for our rail system, setting out how it is to help the environment and boost the economy.

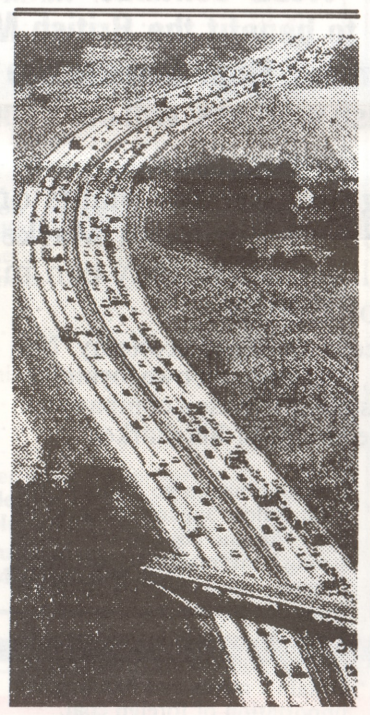
FAILED

Yet Britain does have such a plan for our road network. British Rail's own plan to invest £10 billion over the next ten years in creating once more a decent rail network has failed to get Government backing.

This is not surprising. The Government is totally in the pocket of the roads' lobby. Unlike State-owned British Rail, road transport firms can make big donations to Tory funds. So new road projects get the green light if they can be shown to benefit the economy in general. While rail projects which cannot pay for themselves out of higher fares, regardless of their wider benefits to the economy and the environment - trains are cleaner than trucks - are axed.

The end result of this short-sighted, if not simply corrupt, approach will be disaster. Passengers and freight hauliers are increasingly giving up on our underfunded, ramshackle rail network and flooding onto already overcrowded roads. Demand for private car travel is expected to rocket by 80% over the next 25 years. and no amount of new road building will be able to cope. Britain's transport system will simply seize up, bringing economic calamity.

The only alternative is to get Britain's railways rolling again, with a major long-term investment as part of a major strategic plan for Britain's transport infrastructure. A plan serving the needs of our economy and environment in the 21st Century, not the greed of road haulage bosses bankrolling the Tory Party.



WITHOUT railway investment our transport system will seize up!

The National Front Manifesto states . . .

"In other European countries such as France and Germany there is a fully integrated transport strategy and that is what the National Front would introduce here. Within such a strategy we would make positive moves to switch as much of our transport on to the rail network as possible. Rail transport is far more environmentally sound than road transport and less destructive on local communities and we would like to see the network extended, particularly into new industrial areas.

FAMILY UNDER FIRE

JOHN MAJOR is standing firmly behind the homosexual lobby and has indicated his support for the reduction in the age of consent for acts of indecency.

The Prime Minister has been influenced in his decision by gay actor Ian McKellen who is a frequent visitor to Downing Street.

Coinciding with Mr Major's initative has been the relaunch of TORCHE the Tory Campaign for the promotion of Homo-sexuality, indicating how anxious the Government is to court homosexuals and lesbians, something that was once the sole preserve of the Labour Party.

The National Front acknowledges that what consenting adults choose to do in the privacy of their own home is their own business. But the NF also believes that any promotion of homosexuality is in direct conflict with family life, the corner stone of NF ideology, and must be continually opposed.

Make the Japs Pay-Up!

TWENTY SIX thousand British and Australian former Japanese PoWs are finally getting their act together and demanding compensation from Japan for the torture inflicted on them in the last war.

Japan had claimed that a 1952 Peace Treaty absolved them of any responsibility for atrocities but the European Court of Human Rights argues that the rights of the individual cannot be signed away in any peace treaty.

Leading the campaign for British veterans is former PoW Jackie Bell from Renfrew. He believes that Britain should follow Holland's lead and boycott Japanese imports unless they pay up.

"Our Government should stop kow-towing to the Japanese and do the same", says Jackie. "If they refuse to pay us the compensation we should organise a boycott as well.

Gulf Hero Gets His Pay-Out!

AFTER AN orchestrated campaign by The FLAG and the Lancashire Evening Telegraph, Gulf hero, Gary Lomas received the compensation he was due for injuries he had received at the hands of the Iraqis.

Gary took out special high risk insurance before going off to war, but when he was blinded in one eye the insurance company - Friends Provident - rejected his claim. They said he had either to be totally blind or dead to get compensation.

Gary, a bomb disposal expert with the Royal Engineers, was one of the first soldiers into the British Embassy in Kuwait. He lost his right eye when a mine blew up in his face.

In January, when Friends Provident refused to pay out compensation, The FLAG took them to task in a front page story. Just days after the issue of the paper had been sent to selected MPs in the the North West, action was taken and the insurance company paid out!

LOMAS: Compensation at last

NF CHAIRMAN MEETS THE CANDIDATES

NATIONAL FRONT Chairman Ian Anderson (left) with John Lord the National Front's General Election candidate for West Bromwich West. Ian, who's the NF candidate for Bristol East, and John met at an election meeting in Dudley to raise funds for the local candidate George Cartwright.

VAN LOAD: The NF's minibus is packed with 100,000 election envelopes on their way to Bristol and Torbay.

BRANCHES GET A FIRST-CLASS SERVICE!

IT HAS been a hectic time for the NF over the last six weeks as our election campaign got into full swing. When you are a small Party with a limited number of people who can help during the day, making sure that all preparations for our campaigns run smoothly takes up much time.

Head Office, whom often get unjustly criticised by branches, has certainly pulled its finger out this time and given branches contesting elections an A1 service.

Apart from providing finance to the tune of £2,000 in loans and donations branches have been given generous credit facilities. They have been provided with all their envelopes, all their leaflets, everything they need to know about elections and a delivery service that near enough drops everything at their door.

As well as election material, 1992 has seen the usual literature runs providing branches with their copies of The FLAG and a new much more readable Vanguard within 24 hours of the publications coming off the presses.

Not a bad achievement for a Party that has also had to cope with a 300% rise in membership applications for January and February and a constant stream of calls from local journalists.

All this work was done by the Chairman of the Party aided by a staff of one part-timer, together with the odd helper like Darren Copeland who traveled up from Worthing to assist when he could.

If everything goes according to plan the NF will have between 13 and 15 candidates standing in the General Election. That is 13 or 15 more than we had in the General Election of 1987. With all candidates getting the full works for their campaign that will mean that more than ONE MILLION pieces of NF literature will be reaching the British people.

And just think . . . it is after the election that the real hard work starts.

WINNING BACK LONDON

DURING THE Seventies all areas of London were very fertile ground for the National Front. In the GLC elections of 1977 over 119,000 Londoners voted for the National Front where our candidates beat the Liberals in over 30 seats.

Who can forget 'Election Night Special' when the late Robert McKenzie announced "My swingometer has been made totally useless because of the surprisingly large vote for the National Front".

Heady days indeed. Now London has completely changed. From the East and West, British families have moved out to Essex and towards Oxford and been replaced by Asians. In the South and North the Caribbean influence has changed the areas beyond all recognition.

Now they are hardly areas where there is likely to be a resurrgence of support for the National Front but over the last two years that is exactly what has been happening.

From Croydon in Surrey and Bromley in Kent the NF has gradually progressed back into South London and January 1992 saw an embryo branch in Lambeth get off the ground.

With the help of Slough, West London was established in 1990 and now is making steady progress. The NF in North London is still small and the work of organisation remains on the shoulders of the few but progress is still being made.

In the former NF heartland of East London, despite not putting up candidates at the General Election, there has been growing interest again in the Party which bodes well for the future.

PAPERSALES: NF members from Kent and Surrey have been at the forefront of the NF revival in the capital.

BERMONDSEY: It has been from the streets of South London that National Front activists have launched their campaign to win support for the Party.

Friends of the Front

EACH MONTH money paid by Direct Debit into the bank account of the National Front helps keep the Party functioning in a professional manner. The money comes from 'Friends of the Front' payments whereby individual supporters of the NF pay a minimum of £5.00 a month, every month, into the Party's coffers.

If you would like to support this scheme then please write to 'Friends of the Front' at P.O.Box 230, Worthing, West Sussex BN14 8EG enclosing your first payment. We will then send you a Direct Debit form, your card and the latest Friends of the Front bulletin.

DIRECT CALL

National Front branches in some parts of the country now have their own postal address. You can contact your branch immediately for details of membership, meetings and activities. Save time and support your local unit by contacting them direct.

Setting the Record Straight!

by Paul Flavelle

ON 31st DECEMBER 1991 a book on Heinrich Himmler was reviewed by the Grimsby Evening Telegraph. On January 11th a letter which openly defended Himmler appeared on the letters page of the above paper.

In response to this letter, which included the phrase "Himmler was a hero of our race. . ." there was a predictable outrage and a barrage of letters from many people from Grimsby. Nine of these letters were printed on a full page spread replete with photographs of Himmler and Hitler.

Among those nine letters were two which openly linked the National Front with Nazi Germany and accused our party of serious criminal activities. Needless to say not one shred of evidence was presented in either.

This did not deter the editor and staff at the Grimsby Evening Telegraph who have smeared our Branch on at least two other occasions in the last 18 months without slightest recourses to such trivialities as 'truth' or 'evidence'. This time however they discovered the Grimsby Branch of the National Front would not let the matter rest.

A strong letter was sent to the editor demanding an explanation, this duly arrived in the shape of a curt letter. This letter contained a series of anomolies which left us in no doubt as to the vulnerability of their position under the spotlight.

A second letter was sent to the editor and another addressed to the General Manager of the newspaper's Head Office in London. The results were gratifying. In just over a week a letter was received from the editor agreeing to print a statement 'clarifying' the position of the National Front. This was amended slightly by the Branch and was printed in the Grimsby Evening Telegraph on March 4 1992.

The lesson of this episode is clear and should be taken on board by all branches. Put simply, don't let them get away with anything. Any smear, slander, liable, even outright lies, it is up to us to set the record straight. As a bonus good publicity can also be obtained in the process.

National Front

GRIMSBY branch of the National Front has asked us to point out that it has no connection of any kind with Nazi or neo-Nazi organisations mentioned or implied in recent Viewpoint letters. The Front also states that they condemn all forms of racially motivated violence as mentioned in one such letter. Any member of the National Front guilty of such activity, they say, would be suspended and subsequently expelled from the Party.

AFTER two complaints Grimsby NF got their apology.

SAVING THE BARN OWL

THE COMMON Market is responsible for the destruction of the Barn Owl.

Intensive farming, stimulated by subsidies paid to farmers under the EC common agricultural policy has led to the ploughing up of large areas of rough grazing and their replacement with arable crops.

The removal of hedgerows has reduced the food supply for barn owls who also suffer from the loss of their traditional nesting sites as barns and other farm buildings have been turned into homes.

With fewer that 5,000 pairs left compared to 12,000 after the second world war, action needs to be taken to save the Barn Owl.

A return to traditional farming methods and an end to intensive farming would help the Barn Owl. It is a policy that is advocated by the National Front.

Essential Items

LABOUR CONTROLLED Lancashire County Council is proposing to axe £12.5 million from the 1992/93 education budget. This is part of a £34 million cut in order to avoid rate capping.

While primary and secondary school budgets are to lose £2.5 million some areas in fact have an increase in expenditure.

Among "Essential Growth Items" is an extra £200,000 to safeguard special help for ethnic minority families.

With educational standards already falling, further cuts put the whole system in jeopardy. British children today are getting a second-rate education.

Homes for Rent!

IN The FLAG No. 62 the launch of Ashiana, a housing association for the Asian community in Blackburn was reported.

Hot in its tracks comes the Housing Corportaion which funds and promotes housing associations. It has announced a scheme for new homes in Ice Street, Blackburn to provide rented accomodation for Asian families.

Once again the indigenous population is being subjected to the treachery of positive discrimination.

Trouble at Mill

SMITH & NEWPHEW are to shed 170 jobs at its mill in Brierfield which manufactures specialised medical textile products.

Christopher O'Donnell, the managing director, blamed the job losses on better-placed European competition and a flood of cheap imports from the Far East.

Foreign imports have devastated the textile industry in Lancashire over the years. The National Front believes that the industry can only be saved by a total ban on textile imports into Britain.

WORDS OF ADVICE FROM A TELEVISION RETAILER

Get Your Old Set Repaired!

BERNARD FRANKLIN has been in the television retail and service trade for 34 years. He has seen things deteriorate to a point where he can no longer recommend a single new item of television or video recorder equipment.

DIXONS have promoted the sales of obscure brands of equipment with little consideration of proper after-sales service.

THE STANDARD OF components and design, coupled with over-complexity and over-miniaturisation, has reached a level where new televisions are now unreliable, difficult to service and their use to the customer is short-lived.

Their component parts are more expensive than similar parts for the older sets and the feeling throughout the trade is that, in the not too distant future, television sets and video cassette recorders are going to be disposable items that one does not repair.

Irons, toasters and hair driers have been made to a lower standard and it has become an accepted practice that if an article is out of guarantee and has gone wrong it is thrown away and a new one bought.

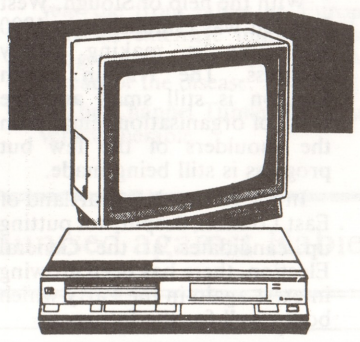
Record players, tape recorders, compact disc players and radios are now considered throwaway items. Televisions and video recorders are reaching the same state, which is not in the interest of either the shops, the consumer or the service industry.

Japanese televisions were first imported into this country in the mid-1960's. Our British Standards Office informed manufacturers that on various details they did not come up to British requirements. The reply came that they (the Japanese) did not recognise British standards - they had their own standards. Our rules were not enforced and the Japanese sets continued to be supplied.

At that time only portables were allowed into Britain in large numbers. The Japanese ingeniously got around this restriction by opening up assembly depots in Britain and our daft government allowed it to happen. Admittedly at that time the quality of these foreign sets was quite good.

The state of the retail and manufacturing industry was healthy, with both British and Japanese goods competing for the market. At that time the trading market was fair. We had Resale Price Maintenance which ensured that sets were sold by everyone at the same price. If one shop fared better than another, this was because it looked after its customers better.

Shops could not get an agency from a major manufacturer without having a properly-trained service staff and an efficient service department as well as selling at the recognised retail price. Then Edward Heath abolished Resale Price Maintenance and the cowboys moved in.



Consortia with large amounts of money opened warehouses and made deals with the manufacturers to buy in bulk at much reduced prices. Comets opened and Dixons started selling TV's. Eventually Dixons and others started to sell obscure-brand equipment with little consideration of proper after-sales service.

These Saisho's, Hinari's and others forced companies like Phillips to close their service departments in order to reduce their overheads. Decca and G.E.C., the last of our best British manufacturers, were forced out of the market. This was a real loss to British industry.

Every television set made by these latter companies had been of the highest standard and easy to service. Parts were cheap and the sets had a long-life. Today, these sets, now 20-30 years old, are still giving excellent service and when they do go wrong are very cheap to repair.

During the last five years there has been a race to cut quality in order to compete with others' prices.

* We have gone from wood cabinets to strawboard, to strong plastic, to weak plastic;

* From moderately priced, long-lived cathode ray tubes to outrageously expensive short-lived tubes;

* From manageable-sized printed circuit boards to flimsy miniature boards where the print is too small to work on. These sets are now so badly designed and finished that it is impossible to carry out anything but the simplest of repairs in the house.

"We have gone from wood cabinets to strawboard, to strong plastic to weak!"

STANDARDS

The discount companies have been chiefly responsible for the drop in standards due to their obsession with trying to undercut the prices of their competitors. Despite the impression that these large outlets like to give, they generally do not sell equipment any cheaper than the small retailers, who have now formed buying groups to keep their prices competitive. The same goods could probably have been bought from a small retailer at the same price, as well as having it delivered and also set-up in their homes and they would have been given instructions on how to use it at no extra cost.

Until recently, with a new TV or video recorder, it was rare to have faults occur during the guarantee period. Now a high percentage of breakdowns are occuring in the first six months and often more than once.

My advice now is to get sets repaired where possible rather than buy a new one. If a set is beyond repair buy a second-hand one a few years old rather than acquire a new one. The older model should give less trouble and last longer.

1906: Women preparers at Wincer & Plant

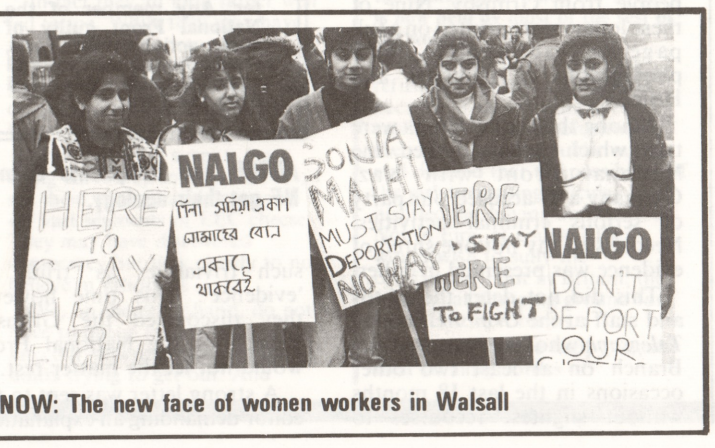
Changes in Walsall

WALSALL'S FAMOUS leather industry owed much of its success to the hard work and dedication of an army of women.

They joined the men at the leather benches at the turn of the century as preparers for the firm Wincer and Plant and their story has been told in a recent exhibition in the town

Through photographs and personal interviews, the exhibition catalogued the jobs of female leather workers, their social lives, how they relaxed and the enormous changes both personal and social brought about by war.

There is still a leather industry in Walsall today. But the women workers are very different from those of 1906. After surviving two world wars the face of Walsall's leather industry was changed in peace time by thirty-five years of Third World immigration into Britain.



NOW: The new face of women workers in Walsall

LANCET BACKS FRONT!

THERE HAS been more confirmation that the AIDS virus is not a threat to the British public.

The National Front has always argued that apart from homosexuals, drug addicts and those requiring blood transfusions, the British public has nothing to fear from the AIDS virus as it is essentially an African disease.

The media have continally caused alarm by saying that the disease can effect everyone.

Recently there has been further backing for the NF stance in The Lancet when the results of a survey were published which showed that 77% of pregnant women diagnosed as HIV positive were of African origin.

SCOT FREE

AN IMMIGRANT from Zaire, who rented a house in Thornton Heath for £300 which was paid for by the DHHS, raked in more than £1,250 a week in fraudulent dole handouts.

Somba Tshimbalanga swindled British taxpayers out of £90,000 in his four year stay in Britain during which he never did a day's work.

Although sentenced to 4 years in prison Tshimbalanga got off scot free by opting for deportation. Needless to say none of the money he stole was returned.

Punjabi Line

A PUNJABI telephone helpline to improve access of ethnic groups to the benefits they are entitled to has been set in Glasgow by Citizens' Advice Scotland. By dialling 0891-345-687 callers will be told how to claim up to 21 handouts.

RISING TIDE OF CRIME

THE LATEST crime statistics have just been published and, as usual, they are the same old tale of woe with crime increasing by leaps and bounds and with Government officials flapping their hands helplessly and bewailing the lack of respect for the law.

And, at the same time, these same officials purport to discern a gleam of hope in the fact that "the rate of increase is decreasing". Just so. I suppose that when we have all embarked on a life of crime, the crime rate will be 100% and no further increase will be possible.

Naturally all the penal reformers and social psychologists wring their hands, wonder how it came to pass, and mutter the magic incantations "deprivation" and "breakdown of social cohesion".

"Criminals by definition have no respect for the law"

Of course, of course! The fragmentation of society that is the inevitable consequence of multi-racialism is the worst kind of deprivation and is indeed a cause of crime though I doubt if that is what the social psychologists had in mind. Sane people, on the other hand, know full well that respect for the law, like democracy, is only possible in a homogenous society.

However, ours is no longer a homogenous society so what is to be done?

As a founder member of the hang 'em and flog 'em brigade I have no doubt at all that only a return to the concept of the punishment fitting the crime will result in a rapid increase in the rate of decrease.

Criminals, by definition, have no respect for the law. When they no longer have any fear of the law we are in trouble and you may have noticed that we are in trouble.

Certainly prisons should provide decent and hygienic, if spartan, accommodation. However, convicted criminals should always be made aware of the fact that they have offended against society and that society demands that they should be punished before being rehabilitated.

"Vicious wilful murderers should be executed"

For habitual non-violent criminals this would mean suffering hard labour - the kind that would make honest work seem like a vision of Heaven. For violent criminals who enjoy inflicting pain; they should be taught the meaning of pain by being made to feel the weight of the lash or the birch. Vicious wilful murderers should be executed since any other form of punishment is a denial of justice, leading to the loss of respect for the law.

However, whenever anyone expresses opinions such as these at an election meeting, the would-be M.P. is almost certain to smile pityingly at such primitive sentiments and declare that such things are impossible in a civilised society. All that one can then hope for is that he discovers the true meaning of our civilised society and gets mugged on the way home.

Balancing the Rights of Child and Mother

by Tina Wingfield

AS AT THE time of the 1983 Referendum, the people of Ireland are once more embroiled in controversial and bitter debate on the issue of abortion.

The debate has been rekindled in the wake of a recent High Court decision to ban a 14-year-old rape victim from travelling to Britain for an abortion. Hundreds of Irish women travel to Britain each year to terminate their pregnancies without commanding action from the Irish judiciary.

This case however drew attention when, before travelling to Britain, the parents of the victim asked the police if tissue from the aborted foetus should be retained for DNA profiling for use in a prosecution. As DNA testing had not been used before in the Republic the police referred the matter to the law officers, who in turn informed the Attorney General.

The right to life of the unborn is clearly enshrined in the Irish constitution (resulting from a 2-1 majority in response to the 1983 Referendum in favour of protecting the right to life of the unborn) and so while 'turning the customary blind eye' to the event would have been more politically expedient, the Attorney General had little choice, but to take action to prevent the unlawful abortion from taking place. An injunction was thus granted banning the girl from seeking an abortion in Britain.

Parents of raped teenager win right to look abroad for help

Irish judges lift ban on abortion girl

HOW the Press reported it

A subsequent appeal to the Dublin Supreme Court by the parents of the girl to lift the ban and allow the abortion was upheld. The judges involved drew attention to the 'special circumstances' surrounding the case and stressed their fear that the girl was highly likely to commit suicide if she were forced to endure the pregnancy to full term.

In short, that in the exceptional circumstances of the case, the well-being and life of the mother overwhelmed the 'rights of the unborn'.

While this ruling has effectively ended a politically explosive situation for the Irish ruling establishment, the public 'abortion debate' shows no sign of abating. Indeed, the pro-abortionist lobby has loudly applauded the ruling as a first step in the campaign to legalise abortion within Ireland, and hopes, with the support of the media, to keep the issue in the public eye until a new Referendum can be justified.

EVERY year thousands of Irish women travel to Britain to have abortions at clinics like the Merseyside Nursing Home in Liverpool.

BOMBARDMENT

In spite of the continuous media bombardment on the social desirability of abortion on demand, it is widely acknowledged by pollsters that the majority of the Irish people remain vehemently opposed to the legalisation of abortion. At the same time however, public opinion has shown sympathy with the plight of the rape victim and her plea, given the exceptional circumstances involved, to be allowed an abortion.

In the event of another Referendum the people of Ireland will be searching for a comprehensive answer to abortion. They will find a solution which reflects their abhorrence of abortion, while accommodating their sympathy for exceptional circumstances, within the pages of the National Front manifesto.

On the issue of abortion it states:

"A National Front government will only tolerate abortions to be performed where a mother has conceived as a result of rape; where medical opinion asserts that there is a genuine and serious danger to the health or life of the mother if the pregnancy is allowed to continue; . . . . . We do not believe that abortions should be available as a kind of post-coital contraception."

This policy is able to offer a morally-justifiable, yet practical and sympathetic, answer to abortion because it stems from a fundamental commitment to the protection of individual civil liberties - the right to life, choice and freedom from enforcement.

From this foundation, it follows that abortion, as a form of 'post-coital contraception' is wrong because it denies the individual civil liberties of the foetus. In this situation the civil liberties of the child take precedence over those of the mother because, given that contraception is widely available, the mother has 'chosen' (by not using them) to take the risk of pregnancy. More precisely, she has 'chosen' to allow, and thus gives rights to, the possible development of another human life within herself.

"Exception can be made in the case of a pregnant rape victim"

Exception can be granted in the case of a pregnant rape victim, however, because the pregnancy has occured as a result of the contravention of her civil liberties - the denial of her 'right to choose'.

It remains to be seen whether Ireland will, eventually, choose to tread the same path as the rest of Europe and legalise abortion. It can only be hoped that the National Front manifesto circulates through the Irish community and helps the Irish people to choose a path which avoids the tragedy within which Europe has engulfed itself.

In a normal pregnancy the civil liberties of the child takes precedence because the mother had a choice whether or not to use contraception.

FAIR DEAL FROM FLEET STREET

BECKER'S GIRL IN RACE HATE STORM

Tennis star's fury at taunts by Nazi thugs

"He who wrestles with me makes me stronger"
Edmund Burke.

SO A REPORT in the 'Daily Mirror' that claimed that tennis star Boris Becker's West Indian girlfriend had been subjected to racial abuse was a total fabrication - WHAT'S NEW?

It is surprising that there should have been disquiet amongst the establishment press over the story that was completely made up by Mirror hack Mark Dowdney as he sat in his London office hundreds of miles from where the ficticious event was alleged to have taken place. The fact that the pack of lies was exposed was only due to the German photographer on whose picture the story was based coming forward to complain.

Obviously the media in Germany likes to get a little nearer to the truth.

But we must remember it is election time and opponents of the National Front will do everything they can to smear our campaign in particular, and racial nationalism in general. There was of course the famous incident in 1979 when a stall holder in the NF heartland of Hoxton claimed to have been beaten up by 'NF Thugs'. Just days before polling day the story received wide coverage.

After investigations by the Police and the National Front it transpired that the fellow wasn't a stall holder and hadn't been beaten up. He was a Daily Mail reporter and member of the SWP who had fabricated the story to smear the Front. The truth did come out in the end but the election had long gone and the damage had been done.

Things have been slightly different for the Election Campaign of 1992. At the time of going to press not one of the national papers has mentioned the NF campaign or its superb 32 page General Election Manifesto.

Ceefax the other evening carried the economic policy of every party from the Tories to the Monster Loonies but not a mention for the NF. They even gave details of the Corrective Party, run by a brothel owner, who aren't even putting up any candidates.

Still we must not worry. We must just get on and do our jobs to the best of our ability. If we can make progress, which we have done - the NF didn't fight any seats in the 1987 election - under the restrictions placed on us today by media and authorities alike, just think of what will happen when we get 'a fair deal from Fleet Street!'.

QUEERS FIRST

GAY MEN and lesbians in Brighton are to be given preferential support when it comes to housing.

Launching the scheme, Tehmtan Framroze of the Local Housing Committee said, "They face terrible harassment and discrimination in all areas of life. By putting them first in council home allocation we hope to redress the balance".

So there you have it. An immigrant putting the requirements of queers and lesbians before the needs of British families in Brighton.

Police Visit

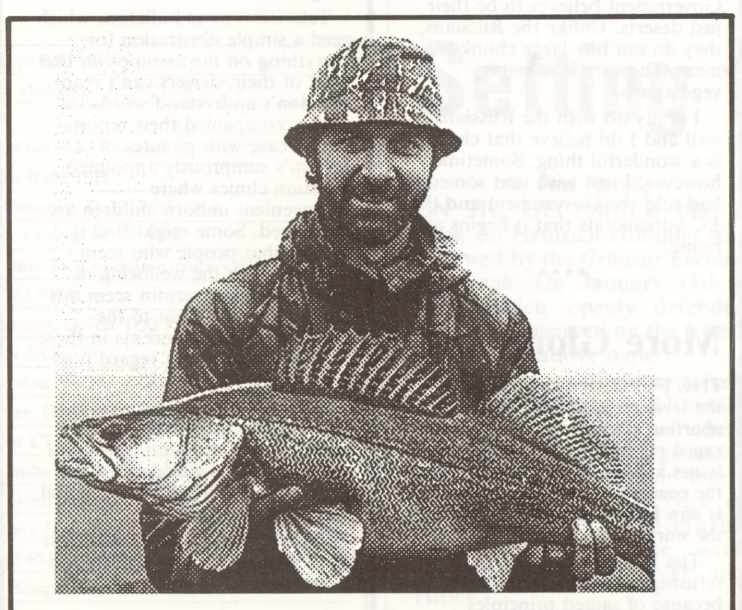
TEN SOUTH Yorkshire police officers have been sent to Pakistan to be briefed on how to effectively police the Pakistani community in Britain.

Before leaving the officers received the blessing of the Pakistani consul in Bradford Mohammed Ali Siddiqui.

Where Your Money Goes

BRITAIN HAS agreed to give Zambia £14,100,000 in aid. The deal was signed by John Major when Zambian president, Frederick Chiluba visited Downing Street.

CATCH IT AND KILL IT!



THE ZANDER: Destroying Britain's stocks of roach and bream.

A HORDE OF immigrant fish is flooding into our rivers, attacking and eating the native British inhabitants. Even those fish not eaten are being crowded out, and will soon be a minority in their own rivers.

The zander, a gigantic Eastern European perch with dagger-sharp teeth and a ravening appetite for British roach and bream, was deliberately introduced into Britain by the Government in order to provide anglers with an exciting multi-species diversity from which to fish. In 1963, the Great Ouse River Board released 97 young zander into the Great Ouse Relief Channel, in East Anglia.

The result was disaster. The zander devoured native fish, grew to nearly 20lbs weight and spread like wildfire. Today they infest not just Fenland waters but the Thames, Suffolk Stour, the Severn, the Warwickshire Avon and the Oxford, Ashby and Coventry canals. Roach and bream stocks in these Immigrant-infested waters have collapsed. The native British predator, the pike, is crowded out and reduced to a second-class fish in its own rivers.

Dr. Phillip Hinckley, a fisheries expert with the National Rivers Authority, explained why the immigrant zander wipes out native British fish stocks with which our own pike stay in balance.

"It has a narrow throat which restricts its diet. As the zander grows in size, the size of the prey fish remains the same, which is bad for other fish populations. It eats a hole in population levels, which can lead to the collapse of some fish stocks."

Now the Institute of Fisheries Management is trying to work out a strategy to get rid of the immigrant fish. Whilst the National Rivers Authority is urging anglers to fight back by killing every zander they catch. Before our roach and bream are wiped out.

Under water, as on land, Immigration has proved a disaster. But at least the officials responsible for the water Immigration have admitted their mistake. And are taking action to win back British rivers for British fish.

The Roots of the British

Who are we as a people? Where did the British come from? Are we a nation of immigrants as some multi-culturalists would argue?

All this and more is answered in STEVE BRADY'S brilliant book.

RABIES THREAT FROM CHANNEL TUNNEL

by Michael Lawson

THE CHANNEL Tunnel will provide the deadly disease of rabies with a gateway into Britain.

Last year a rabid fox was shot just 25 miles from the French end of the tunnel. It was the first time that the disease had been encountered in that area as previously the natural barrier formed by the River Somme had protected northern France.

Although no one has died from the disease in Europe in the last ten years, 8,000 people in France are immunised each year. The current spread of rabies in Europe began during World War II on the borders of Poland and Germany.

The fox population grew and spread westwards and by 1968 had reached France. By the middle 1980s Paris was surrounded although the disease was kept clear of the city by strict controls.

In 1902 rabies, once rife in our country, was eliminated. Throughout the twentieth centry there were minor outbreaks of the disease but they were quickly controlled. Now almost 100 years later Britain has come face to face with the killer disease again. And make no mistake, rabies is a killer disease. In India 15,000 people a year die from rabies, in Europe only an extensive immunisation programme has stopped the spread of the disease.

The Channel Tunnel makes us very vulnerable.

In France 8,000 people every year are immunised against Rabies

THE WORLD OF ALAN BATE

"Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire, burn; and, caldron, bubble."
...Fillet of a fenny snake,
In the caldron boil and bake;
Eye of newt, and toe of frog,
Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,
Adder's fork and blind-worm's sting,
Lizard's leg, and howlet's wing, -
For a charm of powerful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble..."

The Great Non-Issue

THE ISSUE of coloured immigration is one that is raising the political temperature throughout Europe. In France, indeed, the temperature is so hot that politicians of all parties, especially those of the bogus Right, pretend that they are clones of Jean Marie Le Pen, the National Front leader.

In Britain, now that the dreaded General Election is upon us, all the phoneys, creeps and perverts who make up our political establishment have announced that they will forswear making personal attacks on each other and will instead "concentrate on the real issues".

Just so. There is, however, one real issue on which they will not be concentrating, debating or even mentioning - that of coloured immigration and the consequent ethnicfication of every aspect of British life.

It is well over twenty years since the three establishment parties got together - a knot of knot heads, as it were - and declared that race would not be an issue in the election. Well, politicians are not usually noted for keeping their promises but this conspiracy against the British people is one they have stuck to like something to a blanket. Race will not be an issue at this election, save where a National Front candidate is standing, and then there will certainly be no debate.

Labour's position is unequivocal. They rely on the immigrant vote which will enable them to effectively disenfranchise the real British. Anyone who doubts that has only to remember the pictures of the man who would be in control of immigration if Labour won; that foul wretch Roy Hattersley; head humbly covered by a shawl, squatting on the floor of a mosque like some obscene slimy toad, currying favour with the currymen in the hope that their support will enable him to ooze back into Parliament.

The Liberal Party may be the unnatural home of every species of deviant but they have never deviated from their commitment to multi-racialise not only Britain but the whole of Europe. Why darling Paddy Ashdown wants every Chinaman in Hong Kong to be given the right of abode in. Britain.

As for the Tories' ineffective and feeble pretence at limiting the deluge of coloured "political refugees", why Paddy was positively flouncing with girlish outrage, like a virgin who had just received an indecent proposition. "So what if they are economic migrants?" asked Paddy. "They come here for a better life and if we want them to stay away we should pay them to build up their economies".

There was once an English king called Ethelred the Unready who paid Danish raiders protection money to keep them away from our shores. Paddy the Appalling would pay the Blackgeld just as Ethelred paid the Danegeld. And he's the "moderate".

As for the Tories; despite the pretence of being "tough" on immigration, the great bulk of it has taken place during Tory regimes and continues unabated despite the assurances to their dim supporters that they are "doing something behind the scenes". Judging from newspaper reports recently of their extracurricular activities, what they are actually doing behind the scenes doesn't bear thinking about.

They have dropped the feeble Asylum Bill, allegedly aimed at curbing economic migrants, after months of delay. They have initiated more prosecutions against patriotic Britons who resist the imposition of multi-racialism than any previous government.

Anyone who still clings to any delusion about the Tory posture need only read the report of the taxpayer-funded freak tank the "Equal Opportunities Studies Group of Southampton University".

This report, commissioned by the Department of Employment, praises the Government for being top of the league in Europe in fighting racial discrimination and for Britain being the only country in Europe to grant immigrants voting rights - well of course they would since they are fielding a record number of coloured election candidates.

The report was naturally welcomed by Mr Jackson, the Employment Minister, who swelled with pride as he reminded us all that the Tories' determination to develop the skills of every individual is suported by their Race Relations legislation which is the most advanced (i.e. repressive) in Europe.

So anyone who actually wants the British nation to survive has the choice, in the absence of a National Front candidate. of that lot. They should simply take their pick and hit 'em over the head with it.

As a believer in natural justice, I am hoping for a hung Parliament. Furthermore, I am willing to pay a substantial amount for the privilege of doing the hanging.

Ted Budden was a founder member of the National Front. In his column he gives his view of the world.
His comments and observations do not necessarily reflect NF Policy.

Where Charity Begins

I'VE EVERY sympathy with the Russians and their problems with their ruined economy. I must say, however, that all those scare stories about them facing imminent starvation leave me feeling just a little sceptical.

In fact they all look rather well fed to me. While they may have to queue for hours to get their share of the available food; if TV pictures are any guide, when they do get it the quantity appears to be nothing short of lavish.

I see that EEC surplus meat being carved up in huge chunks; I see them triumphantly carrying off vast segments of EEC cheese. They may have discovered democracy but they clearly to not believe in rationing.

We, on the other hand, do not have to queue for hours to get into our supermarkets. We spend hours trying to get out. And unlike the Russians we believe in rationing except that our rationing is by price.

So we see old age pensioners at the delicatessen counter buying one slice of corned beef of two slices of luncheon meat that our Government believes to be their just deserts. Unlike the Russians, they do not buy large chunks of meat. They are involuntary vegetarians.

I really do wish the Russians well and I do believe that charity is a wonderful thing. Sometimes, however, I just wish that someone had told the Government and the EC bureaucrats that it begins at home.

More Glory

THE FURORE over the case of the Irish teenager who sought an abortion after allegedly being raped raised a great many moral issues and once more highlighted the contempt in which our country is now held by most of the rest of the world.

The Irish courts, after first refusing to permit an abortion because of sacred principles enshrined in Eire's constitution, then bowed to the public outcry and decreed that the possibility of the girl commiting suicide justified her having an abortion. Not in Eire, of course - they would wish to sully the consciences - but in Britain, the traditional dumping ground for all of Eire's problems.

After all, we are happy to take their teeming hordes of unemployed citizens, supply them with housing, and tax ourselves to the hilt in order to maintain them in the style to which they've never been accustomed, so why should we not take in their dirty washing?

Isn't it strange that this ramshackle potato republic should not only demand total apartness from the United Kingdom but also lay claim to British territory while simultaneously acting as though it was still entitled to all the privileges that go with being part of the UK.

One can readily understand the Irish stance. After all, hypocrisy is not merely entrenched in Eire's constitution but deeply ingrained in Irish Catholicism.

As for the British stance; it can only be described as contemptible. Not only do we feebly accept the impertinence of Irish judges in decreeing that the girl may be allowed to go to hell or some moral equivalent such as Bitain but we regard it as being in some way a recognition of our enlightened condition.

Television news bulletins, which need a simple illustration for everything on the assumption that most of their viewers can't read and don't understand words too well, accompanied their reports on the case with pictures of Britain's sumptously appointed abortion clinics where inconvenient unborn children are massacred. Some might find it strange that people who seem obsessed with the wellbeing of foxes and other vermin seem not only to be indifferent to the slaughter of the innocents in these human abattoirs but regard it as a matter of some pride.

The Japs may have taken over our industry; our cities are immigrant invested rat holes; our influence in the world is nil, but Britain is still the abortion capital of the whole world.

Doesn't it just make your chest swell with pride? By God, there's glory for you!

Bitter Harvest

A MONTH or two ago, I reported the invasion of my home patch of Brighton and Hove by 700 Sudenese "refugees", our ration of the couple of thousand who have been surreptitiously dumped on Sussex. I don't suppose that, outside of my patch, many British people realised that the people of far-off Sudan had any sort of claim on us. Probably most people actually believed that the Tory Government actually was "making a stand" against the deluge of economic migrants, just as they claimed.

I reported at the time how local schools had been disrupted by the influx of the children of large Sudanese families; of the local resources being lavished on providing language teachers; of the help being made immediately available in order that they might be housed.

The fact that Britain has never had any connection with Sudan save for General Kitchener's campaign against the Mad Mahdi in support of the Egyptian government a hundred years ago seems not to have upset anyone. If there was any resistance to the invasion it was exceedingly muted or totally unreported.

Now, however, there is widespread local resentment at the disparity between the lavish hospitality accorded to the Sudanese and the treatment of the needy British who are invariably told that an income of £60 per week is in excess of their "needs" and disbars them from further assistance. A particular source of grievance revealed in a deluge of letters to the local rag is the fact that some Sudanese have been housed in Sussex Heights, a block of luxury flats where the rent is £140 per week.

Naturally the complainants usually qualify their whinge with the caveat that they are "not anti-Sudanese" - this, presumably as insurance against a visit from the bovver boys of the Race Relations Gestapo. They needn't have bothered. If their whingeing was at all likely to have offended the Race Gauleiters, their letters would most certainly not have been printed.

So what will their protests achieve. I can tell them in advance with total certainty - absolutely nothing. They are regarded as being of no account. They will be treated with contempt.

For if they had been concerned about the ethnicfication of their country and about intinerant blacks bleeding the taxpayer white, they had plenty of opportunity in the past to vote National Front. Instead they voted Tory.

They sowed the bad political seed - now they reap the bitter harvest.

Home Secretary Baker currying favour with Sikhs.

Baker bows to Sikh Terrorism

ACCUSTOMED AS we are to the fawning and seedy vote-grubbing of the two main parties, it was still disconcerting to see our elected Home Office Minister degrading himself, his party and his nation by being garlanded in a Sikh temple last week.

This comes hardly a week after Sikh terrorists had threatened to kill anyone participating in the elections for provincial representatives in India. Despite this the turnout was around 30%, a credit to the firmly democratic sector of the population.

A dastardly and bloody war of purported independence has been waged by Sikh terrorists for some years in which over 20,000 have died. It is reasonably estimated that around £500 from each of several hundred temples in the UK is collected each week towards the terrorist cause. Anyone visiting these places without making pointed protest is aiding and abetting these atrocities.

The Punjab is geographically and ethnically indistinguishable from the rest of the river plains of N.India, and militarily indefensible, as shown by the British in 1840.

Just as the so-called 'Iron Maiden' a few years ago invited the unrelenting black terrorist Nelson Mandela to tea, this displays the lack of principle, and unscrupulous nature of the present government.

So gullible are the Tories that if there were Tory MP's in Northern Ireland we might see them clandestinely fraternising with some of the very scum who periodically try to blow them up!

Resisting the Truth

TWO ITEMS in the latest issue of The FLAG impressed me so favourably that I sent photocopies to my MP.

1) The two white police officers ordered (presumably) to join in Moslem prayers.

2) Neil Keilty's letter about The FLAG being the only newspaper that tells the British people the truth.

"Resisting the known truth" is one of the 6 sins against the Holy Ghost in the R.C. Catechism (article 326).

THOUGHT FOR THE MONTH

"When a nation sins it will have one ruler after another. But a nation will be strong when it has intelligent, sensible leaders"

Proverbs 28,
Verse 2.
Good News Bible

WORDS OF WISDOM

"Persons of genius, it is true, are, and are always likely to be, a small minority; but in order to have them, it is necessary to preserve the soil in which they grow."

John Stuart Mill,
1806-1873
Philosopher.

The National Front Has Been Proved Right Again!

THE NATIONAL Front has been proved right again!

In an issue of The FLAG back in September 1988 there was an article by Steve Brady that predicted that once the Single Market of 1992 approached foreign firms based in Britain would up and run to Europe. The article said that the British workers would be left high and dry and the factory side derelict.

Well it has happened here in Cumbria! Swedish bus giant Volvo is leaving its Lillyhall site in Workington and moving its business to Poland where cheaper labour and easier access to central Europe is available.

374 jobs are to be lost and there is nothing that can be done to stop the Swedish firm from ditching Britain. Listening to local Labour MP Dale Campbell-Savours was like listening to a spokesman from the NF has he attacked Volvo for ditching Britain.

When are our politicians going to realise that bribing foreign firms to come to Britain is not the answer? They should be investing that money in a British Bus industry that would provide jobs and SECURITY for its workforce.

Lets hope that this action from Volvo will warn our politicans what to expect in the future.

HILLINGDON MIND

We need a part-time

ASIAN OUTREACH WORKER

to measure perceived need and establish a befriendly scheme (or other appropriate support service) for people in the Asian Community with a mental health problem. Candidates must have some knowledge of mental health, be experienced in community work, have counselling skills and speak at least 2 Asian languages.

Salary £14,019 (pro rata) for 15 hours.

Madness

PLEASE FIND enclosed a job advertisement that I came across in my local paper while I was searching for gainful employment.

£14,000 per annum for 15 hours a week. Can't be bad I thought and if my maths serves me correctly that's £18 an hour. But what qualifications do I need?

Simple, to be Asian and be able to speak two Asian languages.

Nowadays we hear so much about equal opportunities, ie regardless of colour, creed or race, but of course this only applies when in favour of ethnic minorities.

Can you imagine the outcry if the word Asian was replaced by the word English!

It Doesn't Help Your Cause

AS A NEW member to the NF I must say how much I enjoy your splendid newspaper The FLAG. It says what most British people think about immigration and a lot of other subjects. I was interested in your article on that swine Maxwell. There are plenty more like him.

What I can't agree with was the bit about there being no gas chambers at Auschwitz. A friend of mine was with the P.O.W.s there. He worked in the I.G. Farben synthetic rubber plant on the Sola river and they could see the great chimneys from there and they knew what went on there.

I also remember Belsen as most of 2nd British Army men do with 10,000 unburied corpses.

There are those in Germany trying to make us believe that the holocaust didn't happen, but too many witnesses survive to tell the truth. It certainly will not help the NF's cause to appear to be giving credence to their argument.

I fully support everything the NF stands for. We must stem the flow of immigration and repatriate those who remain here as uninvited guests. Good luck.

J.Chater,
Birmingham.

FISHER-MORE HIGH SCHOOL: Their traditional studies proved a hit with British parents.

PARENTS' CHOICE

BRITISH PARENTS are taking every opportunity of the 'Right to Choose' clause in the Education Bill to ensure a British education for their children.

The National Front's nationwide leaflet campaign explaining how parents can ensure that their children attend a traditional school where lessons will focus on their own culture has been a great success.

Colne in Lancashire was one of the target areas for the campaign and the Spring term school photographs of new pupils show that parents have exercise their Right to Choose as promoted by the National Front.

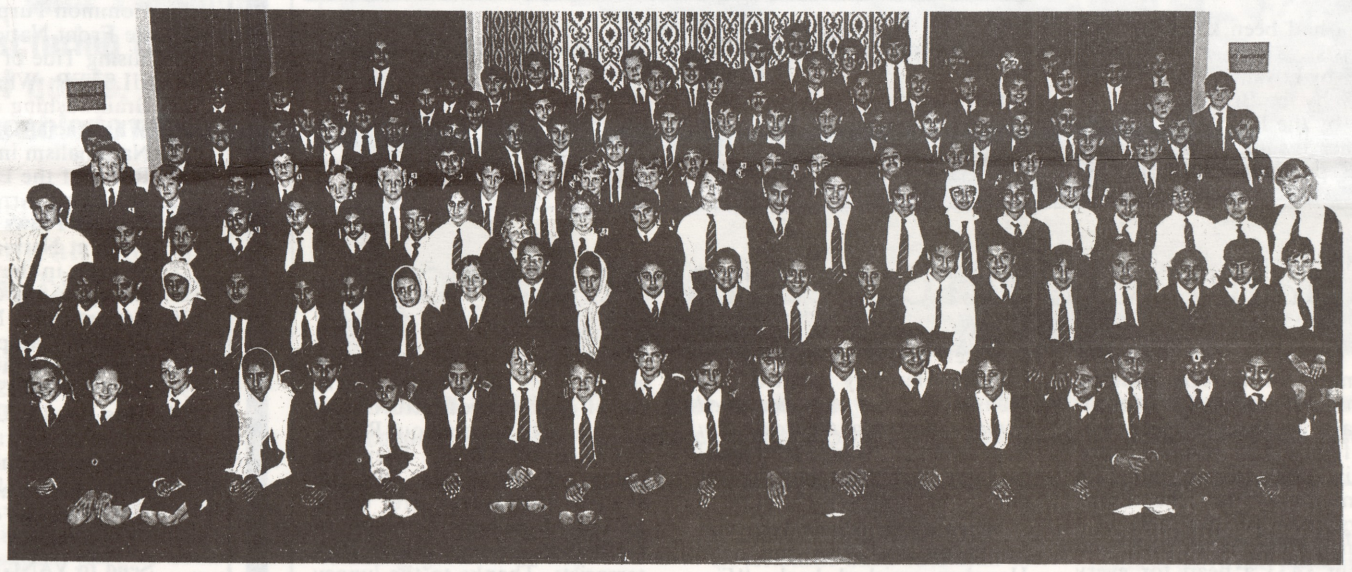
The traditional Fisher-More High School (above) had a predominantly White intake of children while Edge End High School (Below) with its promotion of multi-racialism and ethnic culture attracted a mainly Asian intake.

The National Front's General Election Manifesto in its section on Education covers the segregation of our schools. It states . . .

"We recognise that virtually all parents wish to see their children brought up in their own cultural environment - this is true of White parents and also parents of Asian or African ethnic origin. Consequently pending the repatriation of all people of alien ethnic origin, we would immediately segregate our schools along racial lines.

"This would enable, for example, Moslem children to be taught in Moslem schools and would ensure that British children are given a wholly British education."

Isn't it comforting to see that even without a National Front Government, parents from Colne in Lancashire are choosing to segregate their schools!



EDGE END HIGH SCHOOL: It's Multi-racial approach made it the choice of Asian parents.

Labour's Coy on its Immigration Policy

DID YOU see the article in The Times of 6th March concerning the Commons Home Affairs Committee.

Labour blocked publication of a report from Chief Constables, immigration officials etc regarding the potential flood of immigrants from North African when European border controls are weakened.

The Chairman, Sir John Wheeler, disclosed: " . . . from the evidence, compensatory measures such as ID cards, would be essential in place of strong frontier controls".

Labour MPs stopped the publication of even the minutes of this public hearing until after the General Election.

" . . . they were anxious to prevent the report being used to portray Labour as soft on immigration".

Labour Silent on Ritual Slaughter

WHATEVER HAPPENED to the leaflet "Stop This Evil" highlighting ritual slaughter.

Recently the Labour Party in the guise of Kevin McNamara introduced a bill to outlaw fox hunting and other cruel so-called 'country pursuits'.

IN FAVOUR

While I support them on this, are the Labour Party and in particular Roy Hattersley, in favour of banning the practice of hanging animals, like sheep and goats, up by their legs while fully conscious and slitting their throats?

Roy Jaggard
Dartford, Kent.

Yes, They Are Very Brave

I WOULD like to echo the sentiments expressed in your editorial last month with regard to your election candidates.

They are very brave men and women to stand up and publicise National Front policy. I am certain that a great many people are in agreement with these views but are too frightened to stand up and be counted.

My late husband was a typical example. He was always complaining about immigration but didn't want to do anything about it. He said he didn't want to attract attention to himself.

There Has Been A Media Vendetta Against the UDR!

IN FEBRUARY there was yet another attempt to murder a member of the Ulster Defence Regiment by the IRA.

The terrorists, operating from the Irish Republic despite all that Government's promises to curb the activities of the IRA, crossed the border and shot the UDR man as he went home after his civilian job.

So much for our Government's non-existent security measures.

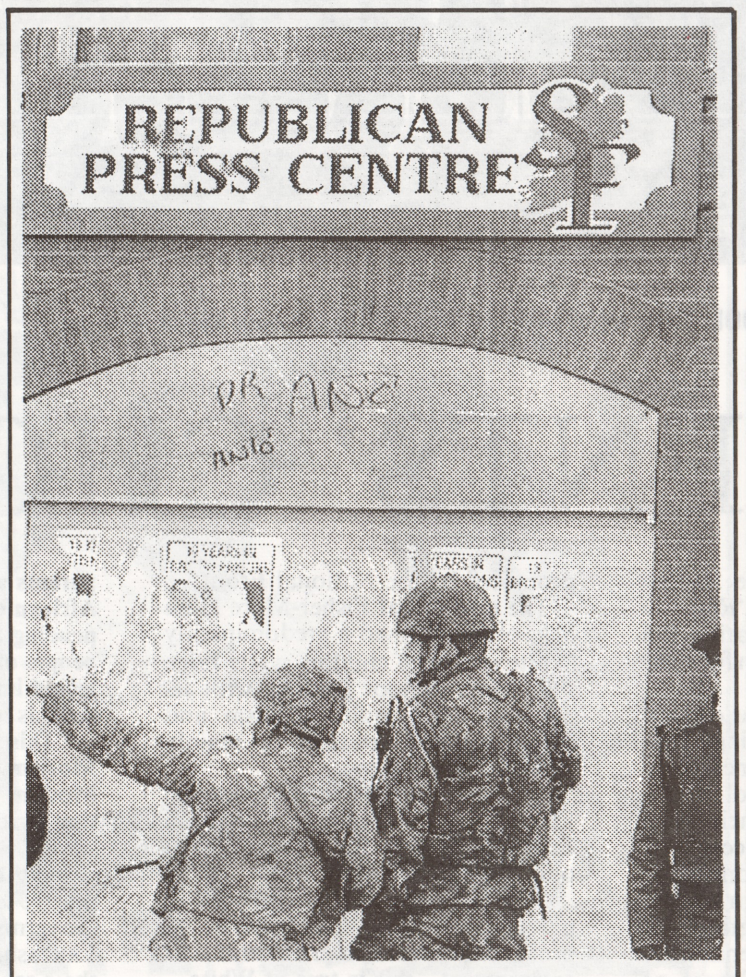
The terrorists were heavily armed with assault rifles but as they gunned down their victim they were in for a shock. Despite being hit in the legs the UDR hero shot dead one of his attackers and forced the others to flee across the border.

Unfortunately many, many members of the UDR have not been so lucky. Despite their devotion to duty the men and women of the Ulster Defence Regiment are continually under attack from a hostile media. They are referred to as 'A Loyalist Militia' which intimidates the Republican population. It was because this sort of atmosphere had been created that four of its members were unjustly convicted of murder in Armagh.

Yet it is a bit of a mystery why there should be so much hostile reporting of the UDR. In 1988 'The Troubles' had claimed 2,705 lives. 31% of these were members of the security forces, 14% members of the paramilitaries and 55% civilians. Who did the killings?

* 62% had been killed by IRA terrorists.
* 27% by Loyalist paramilitaries.
* 10% by the British Army.
* 2% by the RUC
* 0.28% by the UDR. In short Irish Republicans have killed 250 times as many people as the UDR.

It is about time that the media got its facts right. The IRA is the biggest killer of people in this undeclared war. The dedicated and professional members of the Ulster Defence Regiment, full-time and part-time, both men and women are the victims of this vicious murder gang.



MUCH of the incorrect material concerning the Ulster Defence Regiment originated from the Republican Press Centre in Belfast.

Champion Scroungers of Europe

THE IRISH are the champion scroungers of Europe, milking Common Market coffers for all they are worth at our expense. New figures just released show that in 1990 Britain put £2.4 billion more into the Euro-coffers than we got out. £1.3 billion of it went to the Irish, who got out £433 a head for every man, woman and child more than they put in.

No wonder former Irish Prime Minister and IRA gun-runner Charles Haughey gloated at Maastricht "I'm not concerned with the niceties of the treaty. I'm a pragmatist. And I'll support anything that gives me five for one".

When a journalist asked what he meant by "five for one" Haughey smirked back, "Five pounds back from the Community for every one we put in".

No wonder either that the Irish, despite their bankrupt economy and corrupt government, can afford to wage a terrorist war against us to conquer our British Province of Ulster. They are living off our backs. We, the British taxpayers, are being milked of millions a month to featherbed, amongst others, IRA terrorists. Thanks to the lunacy of the Common Market.
